

The reconstruction drawing depicts how the city may have looked in the second century AD. The outline of the abandoned fortress can be seen faintly at the top right with the Roman road running through the Midlands and the north running